

Rationality

Rationality is a limited thing (800609); If one is identified with rationality, then wisdom becomes dimmer and dimmer (790416);

Rationality is egocentric, and very limited. At least it should see that there are many things that happen... which cannot be explained by rationality (790416)

It cannot be applied to things like Dharma, or to the things that support or oppose our sustenance... which is in the void area, and which simply has to be accepted... without rationality (781005); In Sahaja Yoga do not rationalise anything, or think about it, but work it out - it is so simple. What is to be done in

Sahaja Yoga is not to be done mentally (811103); I can't understand people using their rationality to understand Sahaja

Yoga... how can you understand this great power with your limited rationality. I can explain to an ant about your politics... but I cannot tell you how this Divine Power works. I was asked one day to what extent it goes... to what dimensions... it is infinite... you cannot calculate... if you put two mirrors facing each other, and put some object in between, you cannot calculate how many reflections you will get. Even that... you see... but you cannot calculate... and here I'm talking about something that does all that (800721)
